Meet Katrina – Graduate, Hong Kong

Hi, my name is Katrina. I joined both the internship programme and the graduate programme at HSBC.

I actually come from a non-finance background. I used to study French and American Studies in the University of Hong Kong. And to be honest, I thought the transition would be quite difficult at first, until I realized how open minded people at HSBC are.

So, I think what makes HSBC Internship and Graduate Programmes stand out is that we get different desk rotations. Meaning, based on our interests, we get to choose different desks to stay in and we can realise whether or not the desk suits us.

So, if you are a student with a non-finance background like me, and you haven't considered HSBC as a starting point of your career, you should definitely try it out if you have the chance to.

Because finance is not just about the numbers, it's not just about the markets, it's also about the soft skills, it's also about the people.
