

Noel Quinn at London Climate Action Week

Speaker: Noel Quinn, Group Chief Executive, HSBC

Noel Quinn: The clue is in the word “action”. What’s really important this week is that we have a clear articulation of the challenge, some of the solutions that may be there, but then to really work together on turning those ideas into action because we have a very short period of time.

The next five to ten years are critical for the climate agenda and we need to stop talking about potential solutions and start talking about actual solutions. And I want to make sure that we, the financial services sector, and in particular HSBC, are leading that change, are part of that transition and are taking a leadership position in that transition.